

indeed Visibility is key — gain priority in relevant search results with Sponsored Jobs Sponsor your job

Good Schools Guide Special Reports

How consultants are helping parents navigate the path to elite school admissions

Making your way through numerous school applications can be a hard slog because of the bureaucracy and paperwork involved – but consultants can help

Reading Time: 3 minutes

Why you can trust SCMP

Nisha Droch | Startup - Creative Hatti (As Seen On Shark Tank India) |...

We started with a shared love for design and ended up co-founding something we're so proud of. Adobe's been part o...

PAID POST ADOBE CREATIVE CLOUD Learn More

Josiah Ng

Published: 6:15pm, 3 Oct 2025

Getting your child into an elite school or university is more competitive than ever. Good grades, meticulously curated extracurricular profiles and outstanding personal essays are just the start of a strong application. It can be difficult to know what else is required, particularly if your child is set on studying overseas.

For parents who find the ins and outs of the admissions process daunting, seeking the professional help of a consultant may be the best course of action.

More than just paperwork

Aegis Advisors co-founders Dan Chen and Cindy Hah. Photo: Handout

Cindy Hah is the co-founder of Aegis Advisors, who specialise in helping parents place their children in sought-after schools. "We figure out what your goal is and we do our best to help you get there," she explains.

According to Hah, Aegis assists a wide range of families. Their clients include those with specific target schools, as well as those who need help navigating the wide range of fees and academic requirements for local and international schools.

Read More

FURTHER READING

5 trailblazing Hong Kong school alumni who have excelled globally

Is Hong Kong's heavy homework load harming young learners' mental health?

Experts in Hong Kong discuss the trend for gentle parenting

Analyze your world in a new dimension. Explore Asset ID.

In partnership with: S&P Global

dianomi

Ad removed Details